MERRY WAR WITHIN RANKS TO SECURE NOMINATIONS

Two Factions Said to Have Lined up Slates for Principal Court House Offices and Declared War

WELL KNOWN MEN HEAD COMBINATIONS

There's prospects of a merry war over at the county seat within the Republican ranks for nominations for county offices at the primary election. Two factions are said to have each lined up a slate for the principal court house officials and to have declared war to the knife against one another and their various followers. The first of these factions to enter the field is what is known as the Hallam-Carothers combination, and the other is said to be headed by former District Attorney Owen C. Underwood, Assemblyman Charles A. Bentley and Controller John H. Moffit and is called in derision by the former faction the "Tener Old Guard."

Formerly bitter political enemies, ex-Sheriff C. E. Carothers, who used to be former Congressman E. F. Acheson's right hand man and field marshall, and John W. Hallam, who was always "agin" what Acheson was for, are said to have gotten together politically for a nepotism ticket. Carothers wants to land his brother-in-law in the sheriff's office, and Hallam has a nephew whom he wants to nominate and elect as register of wills. To accomplish this more readily a combination is said to have been formed by which a full slate is made up, parcelling the other offices over the county where they will do the most good.

After this alleged combination was said to have been made, some of the friends of other candidates got busy and a new slate is reported to be in the field. This, as previously stated, is said to have the backing of the antinepotism forces. While the personnel of each slate is given with some variations, each with certain exceptions is said to be subject to change, in view of possible exegencies. The stellar positions are assigned, but both factions will fight hard for the nominations for county commissioner, as the control of these officials mean much in the leadership in county politics.

In the meantime these alleged slates are encouraging more candidates to come out. It is believed that a fight between two strong factions will so weaken their forces that some independents may be able to slip in between the lines of battle. Anyhow in view of the strength of the Keystone party in the county last year, there are many who do not believe that the Republican nominees will be sure of election, and the primaries will not by any means end the contest.

THREE MEN KILLED; ONE SEVERELY HURT IN MINE ACCIDENT

Fall of Slate Buries Men Underneath---Mine Cars Run Over Foreigners at Eclipse Workings

Three men were killed and one severely injured in two accidents at the Eclipse mine of the Monongahela River Consolidated Coal and Coke company near California yesterday evening. Two of the dead are Poles who could not be identified.

THE DEAD.

Two undentified foreigners.

Frank Sutherland, aged 35, Roscoe; buried under fall of slate.

THE INJURED.

John Benson Smith, aged 34, California; chest crushed and internally injured; taken to Mercy Hospital, Pittsburg.

Sutherland and Smith had just gone to work together in a room, when many tons of slate fell. Sutherland was covered, and Smith was pinned down by a heavy piece of slate which fell upon his chest.

An hour later the two foreigners were walking from the mine when a trip came up behind them. They were knocked down and killed.

Sutherland had come from Scotland about a month ago. He has relatives in Roscue. Smith has a wife and one child living in Scotland. Reports from the hospital this morning were to the effect that he was getting along well and would probably recover.

WOMEN INVADE CAPITOL IN INTERESTS OF SUFFRAGE

"Uncle Banks" Holland's Bill Causes Quite a Flutter Among Feminine Population of State

FEENEY INTRODUCES PRISON LABOR BILL

(Special Correspondence)

Harrisburg, March 14—The women, God bless 'em, are invading Harrisburg today in the interests of woman suffrage. Our own "Uncle Banks" Holland, who is "right" on the question of women voting, will have ample support in his attitude against taxation without representation. While they do not expect to accomplish anything in the way of legislation this term, the women propose to demonstrate to the Legislators that they're from Missouri, and will show the members that sooner or later some one will have to sit up and take notice of this suffraget business. While the women can't vote now, they have husbands, brothers, sweethearts and admirers who can, and these are being lined up more solidly and urged to proselyte more vigorously than ever before. Te demonstration at the State capital today by the women in favor of their God-given rights will bear fruit.

One of the sensations of the session was the report yesterday that an excise commission bill will go into the Legislature today. The plan is to have a commission of three men in each county to grant liquor licenses. They are to serve for three years. The Governor is to suggest 12 names in each county and from among the number the judges are to appoint the commissioners. This is said have the backing of the liquor interests.

Representative Clyde Kelly, the Allegheny county insurgent, is supporting a bill which gives the referendum and recall in elections in what is known as the "Oregon plan." This bill is said to have the backing of the State Grange and the State Federation of Labor, and is likely to stir up big fight.

A bill to prohibit the letting of prison labor by contract has been introduced by Representative William Feeney of Charleroi. The bill provides that the product of prison labor shall only be used for public institutions and industrial training, and has the backing of the State Federation of Labor.

New tax laws are bobbing up as thickly as crocuses on a city residence lawn. Increased expenditures mean more taxes, and new sources for levying this tribute must be devised.

PAYMENT ASKED OF RAILROAD

County Brings Suit Against P. R. R. to Recover Sum

TROUBLE AT MONONGAHELA

Washington county, through its solicitor, Isaac G. Baum, has entered suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad company for the sum of $22,500, which the latter is alleged to have agreed to pay in the street vacation proceedings at Monongahela, when the new county bridge was erected. In the erection of the bridge a street was vacated, and a viaduct erected for the approach of the bridge, which did away with a dangerous grade crossing. The Pennsylvania company is said to have agreed to pay the sum mentioned, but later refused, and the commissioners have entered suit to recover the amount.

Want Boss Rule

The commission appointed by Governor Stuart to codify and revise the election laws of Pennsylvania has reported in favor of abolishing the uniform primary election. It reports that the members are unanimous in believing that the uniform primary system now in force is founded upon an unsound theory, for the reason that it has a tendency to weaken machine politics. This position is lamely supported by the commission, which states that "a healthy, vigorous party is essentially a voluntary association of citizens, which should be free to pass upon the qualifications of its own members, adopt its own rules, and depend for its success upon the principles which it advocates and the candidates it suggests." In other words, the commission recommends a return to the old boss rule and control of the nominating power of naming candidates for office, which for so many years disgraced our State.

One has only to hark back to the days when former Congressman E. F. Acheson dominated the politics of Washington county. For fourteen years he maintained an absolute grip, naming every candidate and dictating every public position. During that period he maintained an exceedingly "healthy and vigorous party," from his own point of view, and the only way he did it was by the control of the nominating machinery which he devised himself and adapted to suit his purposes. He it was who passed upon the qualifications of the candidates, adopted the rules, and suggested the nominations. In 1905, the last year Mr. Acheson named a slate of county officials, there was absolutely no opposition to any of the candidates he selected. He had the nominating machinery so completely throttled that every aspirant knew for a certainty the futility of opposing his candidates. One has only to contrast the present campaign, where there are a number of good men throughout the county contesting for the nomination of every county office.

It is a return to the old Acheson methods that the election commission recommends. This commission is composed for the most part of old line politicans, to whom partisan politics is the sum and substance of public service. To them the end justifies the means, and the uniform primary interposes many obstacles in accomplishing definite political ends; hence their advocacy for its elimination. Surely the people cannot regard their proposition with any degree of seriousness, but at the same time they should see to it that the measure is not sneaked through the Legislature. The abolition of the uniform primary would be one of the greatest calamities that ever befell the Commonwealth.

Best As It Is

Reports from Harrisburg are to the effect that an excise commission bill is to be introduced into the Legislature in the near future. This is an amendment to the Brooks license law, and would take the power of granting licenses from the hands of the courts and place it in the hands of a commission board. This would be appointed by the court from a list of twelve names suggested by the Governor in each county.

While the excise plan would no doubt be welcomed by the courts, as it would relieve them of a most unpleasant duty, the system would not work to the benefit of society in general. The supposition of such a change is that the commission would be more liberal in the way of granting licenses than the courts. That being the case, the change would not be so restrictive in regulating the liquor traffic as is the license discretion in the hands of the courts. While a change in this respect would not better conditions, it might have the effect of hastening local option and prohibition, as a loosening up of the regulations would undoubtedly arouse public sentiment more actively against the liquor traffic.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

"What business have we got to 'neb' into this Mexican affair, anyhow?" said a Civil War veteran on the streets today. "That government, with which we are on the friendliest of terms, and which is a republic like our own, has a little rebellion on its hands. It is doing its best to suppress it, and will probably succeed in time, if we let them alone. I wonder if people have forgotten the little affair we ourselves had, which started in '61? The older ones will remember that some of the European nations were solicitious lest we might not be able to handle the matter ourselves, and some of them talked of interfering to protect their interest in this country.

"We had a much bigger job on our hands than Mexico now has, and it took us four years to handle it, as well as a lot of diplomacy to keep England and France from interfering in behalf of the interests of their subjects in this country. It's all right to prevent arms and assistance from going out of this country to aid the Mexican insurrection, but this talk of invasion is most unneighborly, to say the least. It looks as though our government wanted an excuse to fight somebody for no particular cause or reason."

"It seems incredible that in this age of intelligence and protest against graft, and after the experience we've gone through in this State, that any one would attempt to pull one over on the people by trying to repeal the uniform primary law," said a Charleroi citizen, who takes a deep interest in civic affairs. "Here's that commission appointed by Governor Stuart to revise the election laws recommending a return to machine methods by permitting each party to hold its primary whenever and however it chooses. The people should hotly resent any interference with the primary law, the principles of which are almost a national issue by the widespread agitation for them in the various States that have not yet gotten the direct and uniform vote in nominating candidates.

"The primary law makes the issue too uncertain for the political bosses, and that is the reason they want a return too old methods. I hope the people will not be so indifferent as to permit the changes the commission recommends to be enacted into a law."

In one of the nearby towns lives a minister who has a young son about six year old, whose grasp of ideas and conditions at times is somewhat startling. The other evening the minister and his family were invited to tea at the home of one of his parishioners. As a matter of course the little fellow came in for his share of attention. At the supper table the host patted the lad on the head and asked:

"What do you intend to do when you're a man, be a minister like your papa?"

"Not on your life," responded the young hopeful. "There ain't enough money in the job."

Stories of the Paris Courts.

Among humorous stories of the Paris law courts it is told how a well known lawyer, M. Alem Rousseau was once pleading a rather tiresome case and, noticing that the judges were paying no attention to him, said, "As the president is falling asleep I suspend my speech." But the judge had just woke up and cried, "And I suspend you from practicing for six months." Nothing daunted, the lawyer retorted, "Well, I suspend myself forever and ever," and, gathering up his brief and cap, he left the court and never appeared again.

A Paris barrister, M. Clery, however, was more vigorous. Seeing that the president and the assessors were all asleep, he stopped, and, dealing a tremendous blow on the desk in front of him that woke everybody up with a start, he cried, "Yesterday at this same hour I was saying"— And the whole bench rubbed their eyes and asked each other if they had really slept through twenty-four hours.

The same counsel was pleading at Versailles on a cold day and remarked that the judges were all turning more and more around toward a stove that gave out a welcome heat. "The tribunal behind which I have the honor of speaking" brought them all right about face at once.

Knew He Was Worshiped.

"In Paris Mr. Whistler and an English painter got into a very turbulent argument about Velasquez at a studio tea" said an artist. "Mr. Whistler at one point in the argument praised himself extravagantly The Englishman, listening, sneered and said at the end:

"'It's a good thing we can't see ourselves as others see us'

"'Isn't it, though?' said Mr. Whistler. 'I know in my case I should grow intolerably conceited'"

Old Time Theater Rowdies.

Rowdyism in London theaters was a common occurrence in the old days, as is shown by the following from the London Post of Oct. 27, 1798:

"Two men in the pit at Drury Lane theater last night were so turbulent and riotous during the last act of 'Henry V.' that the performance was interrupted upward of a quarter of an hour. The audience at last asserted their power and turned them disgracefully out of the theater. This should always be done to crush the race of disgusting puppies that are a constant nuisance at the playhouse every night."

Schoolboy Blunders.

The University Correspondent recently offered a prize for schoolboy mistakes. Here are a few examples: "Mute, inglorious Milton"—these epitaphs are used by a writer who was envious of Milton's being poet orient. He finds "sermons in stones" expresses the same idea as Wordsworth's "the restless stone chat all day long is heard." Calvin was a noted scientist and peer, who died lately. Naples is an independent state in the north of India. Shakespeare made a mistake in mentioning Galen, who did not live until a hundred years after his time. The feminine of fox is foxhen. John Burns was the name of one of the claimants to the throne of Scotland in the reign of Edward I. The pyramids are a range of mountains between France and Spain. The three highest mountains in Scotland are Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond and Ben Jonson. Wolsey saved his life by dying on the way from York to London. When the English first landed in Australia the only four footed animal in the country was a rat. Monsoons are fertile gorges between the Himalayas.

When Bjornson Died.

Bjornson's son, in describing the last hours of his father, writes: "Now and then the bright flame of his humor flickered up. The doctor felt his pulse and said it was good. With his face beaming with humor he turned toward us and said, 'I am the first man to die with a good pulse.' He said one evening—and it seemed as if an old wise man was speaking with the weight of experience, 'Now I could write—yes, now I could write, for I have been in the realms of death and have felt the pain that attends death.' And when all of us thought that the indifference of death was upon him—my mother, who always gave him his food, which he would receive only from her, stood at the bedside with a brooch on her breast which she had worn at her confirmation—then he opened his eyes and looked at her. He smiled, lifted his hand and touched the brooch. This was the last sign to the outer world he was able to give."

A Cold Ride.

All through his life Senator Dolliver of Iowa had a horror of fast trains and possible railroad wrecks. Once he was on a train with Vice President Fairbanks.

Dolliver awoke in the middle of the night, and it seemed to him that the train was going at terrific speed. He climbed out of his berth and, arrayed only in his pajamas, started down the length of the train to find the conductor and ask him to order the train run at less speed. It was a cold night, but the senator did not mind that until the door of his car snapped shut and locked behind him and he found that the door of the next coach was also locked. He rode sixty-five miles locked out in the cold of the vestibule before he could wake up anybody to let him in. Mr. Fairbanks finally heard his cries for help and rescued him.—New York Tribune.

Necks and Legs of Animals.

With few exceptions there is a marked equality between the length of the necks and of the legs of both birds and quadrupeds, and whether they be long or short is determined chiefly by the place where the animal must go for its food. This is especially noticeable in beasts that feed constantly upon grass, in which case the neck has just a slight advantage in that it cannot hang perpendicularly down. Crocodiles, lizards and fish have practically no necks. Fowls that feed in the water also offer an example of this correspondence between the members, with the exception of swans and geese and some Indian birds, which gather their food from the bottom of pools and must have long necks for that purpose, while the short legs make it more convenient for them to swim.—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

A Story Pepys Tells.

Pepys tells in his diary that in the reign of King Charles II. a customer bargaining with a London merchant for claret hired a confederate to "thunder (which he had the art of doing upon a deal board) and to rain and hail—that is, make the noise of—so as to give them a pretense of undervaluing their merchant's wines, by saying this thunder would spoil and turn them, which was so reasonable to the merchant that he did abate two pistolls per tun for the wine in belief of that."

A Mighty Difference.

Brougham used to tell an anecdote about the flight from Waterloo. Napoleon was greatly depressed. His aid riding beside him thought he might be sorrowing over the loss of so many old comrades at arms and tried to comfort him by saying that Wellington also must have lost many friends. "He has not lost the battle," was the reply.

Utterly Useless.

"Pa, what is a futile remark?"

"The one a man makes for the purpose of changing the subject when his wife complains because he has forgotten their wedding anniversary."—Chicago Record-Herald.

She Was Wise.

"I asked Miss Jimps to sing something, and she refused point blank. Is she grouchy?"

"No. She's trying to make a hit with you. Cheer up."—Toledo Blade.

A Sound Reason.

Mistress—Didn't you hear me calling, Jane? Jane—Yes'm, but you told me the other day never to answer you back.—Throne and Country.

Whatever enlarges hope will exalt courage.—Johnson.

Playing at Death.

The mother of Ivan Turgenev, the Russian novelist, was a trying person to live with, irritable, capricious and unreasonable. On Ivan's birthday in 1845, we are told in "Two Russian Reformers," after a day of festivities, Mme. Turgenev pretended to be dying. "She sent for her confessor and, placing before her the portrait of her son Ivan, exclaimed 'Adieu, Ivan! Adieu, Nicolas! Adieu, my children!' Then she ordered her forty servants and all the men employed about the house to say goodby to her. When they had filed out of the room Mme. Turgenev declared that she felt better and asked for tea. The next day the following 'order' appeared:

"'I give orders that tomorrow morning the disobedient servants, Nicolas Jacovlef, Ivan Petrof and Egor Kondratatief, shall sweep the court in front of my windows.'

"Those names were those of servants who had not appeared at her bedside, possibly because they were a little drunk that evening. 'Good for nothings! Drunkards!' exclaimed Mme. Turgenev. 'They rejoice at the death of their mistress!'"

The Bank Beat the Prince.

The Gentlewoman of London recalls the following story of the prince regent and Coutts' bank: "When George IV. was a regent he had a grudge against Coutts and determined to play a trick on the authorities. In those days even the great banks kept very small reserves of cash, and the playful prince thought out a plan to close Coutts'. So he sent his equerry round from Carlton House with a check for £100,000, fondly hoping that the bank would not be able to pay over the counter. The prince's trick, however, failed of success, as the wary old partner of the Strand bank proved equal to the occasion. He said at once to the equerry, 'How will his royal highness take the amount, in gold or notes?' The equerry hesitated and then said he had better go back to Carlton House to inquire. So he departed, and Coutts' had time to send to the Bank of England and get the cash required, but it was not needed, as the prince regent, seeing that Coutts' had got the best of him, did not return the check in question."

Eggs That Can't Be Found.

The eggs of some common birds of the present day have never been found. There is the robin snipe; its eggs have never been seen. An English zoologist kept a man going up and down the coast of Labrador for weeks purposely to get a robin snipe's egg, but it was in vain. The bird is known by thousands of people, but it breeds so far north and so remote from any civilization that no scientific observer can ever get to its nest ere the young are hatched and have taken to wing. The frigate bird that is so commonly seen at sea on the Pacific and off the West Indies is such a solitary bird and is so seldom seen in its nest during the hours of daylight that its egg is rare. It seems strange, but the eggs of so well known a bird as the sandpiper have never been found and are almost priceless.—London Globe.

Reversed the Proposition

Robert Wickliffe Woolley, the writer found it necessary not long ago to take a trip west. On the dining car of the train he saw that he had in his pocket 10 cents in change, his smallest bank note being one for $50. He handed this to the porter, who went to the end of the car for a conference with the conductor.

"I'm very sorry about this," said the conductor, standing in front of Woolley and toying with the big bill, "but we haven't the change for $50. We'll just take your address and send you the change."

Woolley calmly reached over and took possession of the banknote. "You've got nothing on me," he said. "I'll take the address of the railroad and send the price of the meal."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Baths of Caracalla.

The Romans appear to have been well off in the matter of bathing places in the first and second centuries. In the baths of Caracalla 1,600 bathers could be accommodated at one time. The inclosed area was 360 square yards, but it included a course for foot racing. The bathing establishment was 240 yards in length by 124 wide. The remains of the walls are eight and ten feet thick and in some places as much as fifty feet high.

A Cumulative Test.

As the thin man and the stout one were talking of diet and food in general the thin man said: "You can get an excellent dinner at Clapham's, the restaurant near my office, for 25 cents. Ever try one of his dinners?"

"One of 'em! Yes, I should say I had," said the stout man. "Why, I ate four of 'em one day last week!"

The Best Thing.

"What do you mean by kissing me, Herr Frisch?"

"My aunt told me to. She told me to come and help myself to the best thing I could find in the kitchen."—Fliegende Blatter.

Just Men.

If any one says that he has seen a just man in want of bread I answer that it was in some place where there was no other just man.—St. Clement.

Can Afford It.

"Has the doctor a large practice?"

"So large that when people have nothing the matter with them he tells them so."—Pittsburg Post.

The Proof.

"You're very contradictory, my son."

"No, I'm not, pa."—Lippincott's.

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Made Safe by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health means so much to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

ALL MY PIMPLES GONE

Girl Tells How a Blotchy Skin Was Cleansed By a Simple Wash.

"I was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Minnie Pickard of Altamahaw, N. C. "It was all full of pimples and scars, but after using D. D. D. Prescription I can say that now there is no sign of that Eczema, and that was three years ago."

D D D has become so famous as a cure and instant relief in Eczema and all other serious skin diseases, that its value is sometimes overlooked in clearing up rash, pimples, blackheads, and all other minor forms of skin impurities.

The fact is, that while D. D. D. is so penetrating that it strikes to the very root of Eczema or any other serious trouble, the soothing Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients are so carefully compounded there is no wash for the skin made that can compare with this great household remedy for every kind of skin trouble.

D. D. D. is pleasant to use, perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, and absolutely reliable. A 25-cent bottle will give you positive proof of the wonderful effectiveness of this great remedy.

A Miracle Under Orders.

In "The Glory of the Shia World," translated from a Persian manuscript, is a story that will interest Christian Scientists:

"Nadir, builder of the 'golden porch of Nadir,' in the sacred city of Meshed, was a world conqueror and a lord of perception, albeit cruel. Of his power of perception they relate that one day when he entered the sacred shrine he saw a blind man invoking the aid of the imam, and upon inquiry he learned that he had been there for several months. The great monarch asked him why his faith was so weak that his sight had not been restored and swore that if on his return he found him still blind he would cut off his head. The wretched man prayed so fervently and fixed his mind so intently on the imam that within a few minutes his sight was restored."

Might Be In a Nice Fix.

Two men of Milwaukee were discussing the case of a person of their acquaintance whose obituary, it appears, had been printed by mistake in one of that city's newspapers.

"Oh, ho!" exclaimed one of the Germans. "So dey haf brinted der funeral notice of a man who is not dead already! Vell, now, he'd be in a nice fix if he vas one of dose beeble vot believes everything dey sees in der bapers."—Harper's Magazine.

Do You Want to Get Slender?

A food specialist said of dieting: "The simplest, easiest and most efficacious diet to bring down the weight is the one dish diet. At no meal, that is, should more than one dish be eaten. The dish may be what you will—Irish stew, macaroni and cheese, roast beef, vegetable soup, bacon and eggs—but no courses are to precede or follow it. You may eat as much as you choose of the dish, and yet, for all that, you will lose weight steadily. It's the variety of dishes—the oysters, soup, fish, turkey, mince pie, ice cream—it's the variety of dishes, creating an artificial appetite when the body has really had all it requires, that causes corpulence. If we confine ourselves to one dish we know when we've had enough—we don't know otherwise—and the result is that we soon drop down to the slimness natural to children, animals and temperate and healthy men and women."—Kansas City Star.

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the lone watches of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams. Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalier will be met at midnight, his bridle rein in one hand and an upraised umbrella in the other. It looks weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason. They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, lunatics—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness.

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of a Porto Rican, to tempt fate, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day In the Life of an English Lady In 1791.

As for industrious idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Brun assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and travel all night home. "That," she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush. "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then clambered over the benches and went to Hasting's trial in the hall, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobert's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."—Atlantic Monthly.

A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer:

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said impatiently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask this gentleman what he thinks of the face."

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first rate."

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lyuden or Llyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troynovant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town. This latter is probably the correct version of the story, if for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said a prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburg. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far.

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"'Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shouts preferred.'"

Preferences.

"I think I'll spend my vacation on the lynx," said the first flea. "I'm fond of golf."

"The giraffe for mine," declared the second flea. "I need the highest altitude I can find."—Washington Herald.

MERRY WAR WITHIN RANKS TO SECURE NOMINATIONS

Two Factions Said to Have Lined up Slates for Principal Court House Offices and Declared War

WELL KNOWN MEN HEAD COMBINATIONS

There's prospects of a merry war over at the county seat within the Republican ranks for nominations for county offices at the primary election. Two factions are said to have each lined up a slate for the principal court house officials and to have declared war to the knife against one another and their various followers. The first of these factions to enter the field is what is known as the Hallam Carothers combination, and the other is said to be headed by former District Attorney Owen C Underwood, Assemblyman Charles A. Bentley and Controller John H. Moffit and is called in derision by the former faction the "Tener Old Guard."

Formerly bitter political enemies, ex-Sheriff C E. Carothers, who used to be former Congressman E. F. Acheson's right hand man and field marshall, and John W. Hallam, who was always "agin" what Acheson was for, are said to have gotten together politically for a nepotism ticket. Carothers wants to land his brother-in-law in the sheriff's office, and Hallam has a nephew whom he wants to nominate and elect as register of wills. To accomplish this more readily a combination is said to have been formed by which a full slate is made up, parcelling the other offices over the county where they will do the most good.

After this alleged combination was said to have been made, some of the friends of other candidates got busy and a new slate is reported to be in the field. This, as previously stated, is said to have the backing of the antinepotism forces. While the personnel of each slate is given with some variations, each with certain exceptions is said to be subject to change, in view of possible exegencies The stellar positions are assigned, but both factions will fight hard for the nominations for county commissioner, as the control of these officials mean much in the leadership in county politics.

In the meantime these alleged slates are encouraging more candidates to come out. It is believed that a fight between two strong factions will so weaken their forces that some independents may be able to slip in between the lines of battle. Anyhow in view of the strength of the Keystone party in the county last year, there are many who do not believe that the Republican nominees will be sure of election, and the primaries will not by any means end the contest.

WOMEN INVADE CAPITOL IN INTERESTS OF SUFFRAGE

"Uncle Banks" Holland's Bill Causes Quite a Flutter Among Feminine Population of State

FEENEY INTRODUCES PRISON LABOR BILL

(Special Correspondence)

Harrisburg, March 14—The women, [illegible] invading Harrisburg today in the interests of woman suffrage. Our own "Uncle Banks" Holland, who is "right" on the question of women voting, will have ample support to his attitude against taxation without representation. While they do not expect to accomplish anything in the way of legislation this term, the women propose to demonstrate to the Legislators that they're from Missouri, and will show the members that sooner or later some one will have to sit up and take notice of this suffraget business. While the women can't vote now, they have husbands, brothers, sweethearts and admirers who can, and these are being lined up more solidly and urged to proselyte more vigorously than ever before Te demonstration at the State capital today by the women in favor of their God-given rights will bear fruit.

One of the sensations of the session was the report yesterday that an excise commission bill will go into the Legislature today The plan is to have a commission of three men in each county to grant liquor licenses. They are to serve for three years. The Governor is to suggest 12 names in each county and from among the number the judges are to appoint the commissioners. This is said have the backing of the liquor interests.

Representative Clyde Kelly, of Allegheny county insurgent, is supporting a bill which gives the referendum and recall in elections in what is known as the "Oregon plan." This bill is said to have the backing of the State Grange and the State Federation of Labor, and is likely to stir up big fight.

A bill to prohibit the letting of prison labor by contract has been introduced by Representative William Feeney of Charleroi. The bill provides that the product of prison labor shall only be used for public institutions and industrial training, and has the backing of the State Federation of Labor.

New tax laws are bobbing up as thickly as crocuses on a city residence lawn Increased expenditures mean more taxes, and new sources for levying this tribute must be devised.

Want Boss Rule

The commission appointed by Governor Stuart to codify and revise the election laws of Pennsylvania has reported in favor of abolishing the uniform primary election. It reports that the members are unanimous in believing that the uniform primary system now in force is founded upon an unsound theory, for the reason that it has a tendency to weaken machine politics. This position is lamely supported by the commission, which states that "a healthy, vigorous party is essentially a voluntary association of citizens, which should be free to pass upon the qualifications of its own members, adopt its own rules, and depend for its success upon the principles which it advocates and the candidates it suggests." In other words, the commission recommends a return to the old boss rule and control of the nominating power of naming candidates for office, which for so many years disgraced our State.

One has only to hark back to the days when former Congressman E. F. Acheson dominated the politics of Washington county. For fourteen years he maintained an absolute grip, naming every candidate and dictating every public position. During that period he maintained an exceedingly "healthy and vigorous party," from his own point of view, and the only way he did it was by the control of the nominating machinery which he devised himself and adapted to suit his purposes. He it was who passed upon the qualifications of the candidates, adopted the rules, and suggested the nominations. In 1905, the last year Mr. Acheson named a slate of county officials, there was absolutely no opposition to any of the candidates he selected. He had the nominating machinery so completely throttled that every aspirant knew for a certainty the futility of opposing his candidates. One has only to contrast the present campaign, where there are a number of good men throughout the county contesting for the nomination of every county office.

It is a return to the old Acheson methods that the election commission recommends. This commission is composed for the most part of old line politicans, to whom partisan politics is the sum and substance of public service. To them the end justifies the means, and the uniform primary interposes many obstacles in accomplishing definite political ends; hence their advocacy for its elimination. Surely the people cannot regard their proposition with any degree of seriousness, but at the same time they should see to it that the measure is not sneaked through the Legislature. The abolition of the uniform primary would be one of the greatest calamities that ever befell the Commonwealth.

Best As It Is

Reports from Harrisburg are to the effect that an excise commission bill is to be introduced into the Legislature in the near future. This is an amendment to the Brooks license law, and would take the power of granting licenses from the hands of the courts and place it in the hands of a commission board. This would be appointed by the court from a list of twelve names suggested by the Governor in each county.

While the excise plan would no doubt be welcomed by the courts, as it would relieve them of a most unpleasant duty, the system would not work to the benefit of society in general. The supposition of such a change is that the commission would be more liberal in the way of granting licenses than the courts. That being the case, the change would not be so restrictive in regulating the liquor traffic as is the license discretion in the hands of the courts. While a change in this respect would not better conditions, it might have the effect of hastening local option and prohibition, as a loosening up of the regulations would undoubtedly arouse public sentiment more actively against the liquor traffic.

PICKED UP IN PASSING

"What business have we got to 'neb' into this Mexican affair, anyhow?" said a Civil War veteran on the streets today. "That government, with which we are on the friendliest of terms, and which is a republic like our own, has a little rebellion on its hands. It is doing its best to suppress it, and will probably succeed in time, if we let them alone. I wonder if people have forgotten the little affair we ourselves had, which started in '61? The older ones will remember that some of the European nations were solicitious lest we might not be able to handle the matter ourselves, and some of them talked of interfering to protect their interest in this country.

"We had a much bigger job on our hands than Mexico now has, and it took us four years to handle it, as well as a lot of diplomacy to keep England and France from interfering in behalf of the interests of their subjects in this country. It's all right to prevent arms and assistance from going out of this country to aid the Mexican insurrection, but this talk of invasion is most unneighborly, to say the least. It looks as though our government wanted an excuse to fight somebody for no particular cause or reason."

"It seems incredible that in this age of intelligence and protest against graft, and after the experience we've gone through in this State, that any one would attempt to pull one over on the people by trying to repeal the uniform primary law," said a Charleroi citizen, who takes a deep interest in civic affairs. "Here's that commission appointed by Governor Stuart to revise the election laws recommending a return to machine methods by permitting each party to hold its primary whenever and however it chooses. The people should hotly resent any interference with the primary law, the principles of which are almost a national issue by the widespread agitation for them in the various States that have not yet gotten the direct and uniform vote in nominating candidates.

"The primary law makes the issue too uncertain for the political bosses, and that is the reason they want a return too old methods. I hope the people will not be so indifferent as to permit the changes the commission recommends to be enacted into a law."

In one of the nearby towns lives a minister who has a young son about six year old, whose grasp of ideas and conditions at times is somewhat startling. The other evening the minister and his family were invited to tea at the home of one of his parishioners. As a matter of course the little fellow came in for his share of attention. At the supper table the host patted the lad on the head and asked:

"What do you intend to do when you're a man, be a minister like your papa?"

"Not on your life," responded the young hopeful. "There ain't enough money in the job."

Stories of the Paris Courts.

Among humorous stories of the Paris law courts it is told how a well known lawyer, M. Alem Rousseau, was once pleading a rather tiresome case and, noticing that the judges were paying no attention to him, said, "As the president is falling asleep I suspend my speech." But the judge had just woke up and cried, "And I suspend you from practicing for six months." Nothing daunted, the lawyer retorted, "Well, I suspend myself forever and ever," and, gathering up his brief and cap, he left the court and never appeared again.

A Paris barrister, M. Clery, however, was more vigorous. Seeing that the president and the assessors were all asleep, he stopped, and, dealing a tremendous blow on the desk in front of him that woke everybody up with a start, he cried, "Yesterday at this same hour I was saying"— And the whole bench rubbed their eyes and asked each other if they had really slept through twenty-four hours.

The same counsel was pleading at Versailles on a cold day and remarked that the judges were all turning more and more around toward a stove that gave out a welcome heat. "The tribunal behind which I have the honor of speaking" brought them all right about face at once.

Knew He Was Worshiped.

"In Paris Mr. Whistler and an English painter got into a very turbulent argument about Velasquez at a studio tea," said an artist. "Mr. Whistler at one point in the argument praised himself extravagantly. The Englishman, listening, sneered and said at the end: "It's a good thing we can't see ourselves as others see us."

"Isn't it, though?" said Mr. Whistler. "I know in my case I should grow intolerably conceited."

Old Time Theater Rowdies.

Rowdyism in London theaters was a common occurrence in the old days, as is shown by the following from the London Post of Oct. 27, 1798:

"Two men in the pit at Drury Lane theater last night were so turbulent and riotous during the last act of 'Henry V.' that the performance was interrupted upward of a quarter of an hour. The audience at last asserted their power and turned them disgracefully out of the theater. This should always be done to crush the race of disgusting puppies that are a constant nuisance at the playhouse every night."

Schoolboy Blunders.

The University Correspondent recently offered a prize for schoolboy mistakes. Here are a few examples: "Mute, inglorious Milton"—these epitaphs are used by a writer who was envious of Milton's being poet orient. He finds "sermons in stones" expresses the same idea as Wordsworth's "the restless stone that all day long is heard." Calvin was a noted scientist and peer, who died lately. Naples is an independent state in the north of India. Shakespeare made a mistake in mentioning Galen, who did not live until a hundred years after his time. The feminine of fox is foxhen. John Burns was the name of one of the claimants to the throne of Scotland in the reign of Edward I. The pyramids are a range of mountains between France and Spain. The three highest mountains in Scotland are Ben Nevis, Ben Lomond and Ben Jonson. Wolsey saved his life by dying on the way from York to London. When the English first landed in Australia the only four footed animal in the country was a rat. Monsoons are fertile gorges between the Himalayas.

When Bjornson Died.

Bjornson's son, in describing the last hours of his father, writes: "Now and then the bright flame of his humor flickered up. The doctor felt his pulse and said it was good. With his face beaming with humor he turned toward us and said, 'I am the first man to die with a good pulse.' He said one evening—and it seemed as if an old wise man was speaking with the weight of experience, 'Now I could write—yes, now I could write, for I have been in the realms of death and have felt the pain that attends death.' And when all of us thought that the indifference of death was upon him—my mother, who always gave him his food, which he would receive only from her, stood at the bedside with a brooch on her breast which she had worn at her confirmation—then he opened his eyes and looked at her. He smiled, lifted his hand and touched the brooch. This was the last sign to the outer world he was able to give."

A Cold Ride.

All through his life Senator Dolliver of Iowa had a horror of fast trains and possible railroad wrecks. Once he was on a train with Vice President Fairbanks.

Dolliver awoke in the middle of the night, and it seemed to him that the train was going at terrific speed. He climbed out of his berth and, arrayed only in his pajamas, started down the length of the train to find the conductor and ask him to order the train run at less speed. It was a cold night, but the senator did not mind that until the door of his car snapped shut and locked behind him and he found that the door of the next coach was also locked. He rode sixty-five miles locked out in the cold of the vestibule before he could wake up anybody to let him in. Mr. Fairbanks finally heard his cries for help and rescued him.—New York Tribune.

Necks and Legs of Animals.

With few exceptions there is a marked equality between the length of the necks and of the legs of both birds and quadrupeds, and whether they be long or short is determined chiefly by the place where the animal must go for its food. This is especially noticeable in beasts that feed constantly upon grass, in which case the neck has just a slight advantage in that it cannot hang perpendicularly down. Crocodiles, lizards and fish have practically no necks. Fowls that feed in the water also offer an example of this correspondence between the members, with the exception of swans and geese and some Indian birds, which gather their food from the bottom of pools and must have long necks for that purpose, while the short legs make it more convenient for them to swim.—Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

A Story Pepys Tells.

Pepys tells in his diary that in the reign of King Charles II. a customer bargaining with a London merchant for claret hired a confederate to "thunder (which he had the art of doing upon a deal board) and to rain and hail—that is, make the noise of—so as to give them a pretense of undervaluing their merchant's wines, by saying this thunder would spoil and turn them, which was so reasonable to the merchant that he did abate two pistolls per tun for the wine in belief of that."

A Mighty Difference.

Brougham used to tell an anecdote about the flight from Waterloo. Napoleon was greatly depressed. His aid riding beside him thought he might be sorrowing over the loss of so many old comrades at arms and tried to comfort him by saying that Wellington also must have lost many friends. "He has not lost the battle," was the reply.

Utterly Useless.

"Pa, what is a futile remark?"

"The one a man makes for the purpose of changing the subject when his wife complains because he has forgotten their wedding anniversary."—Chicago Record-Herald.

She Was Wise.

"I asked Miss Jimps to sing something, and she refused point blank. Is she grouchy?"

"No. She's trying to make a hit with you. Cheer up."—Toledo Blade.

A Sound Reason.

Mistress—Didn't you hear me calling, Jane? Jane—Yes'm, but you told me the other day never to answer you back.—Throne and Country.

Playing at Death.

The mother of Ivan Turgenev, the Russian novelist, was a trying person to live with, irritable, capricious and unreasonable. On Ivan's birthday in 1845, we are told in "Two Russian Reformers," after a day of festivities, Mme. Turgenev pretended to be dying. "She sent for her confessor and, placing before her the portrait of her son Ivan, exclaimed 'Adieu, Ivan! Adieu, Nicolas! Adieu, my children!' Then she ordered her forty servants and all the men employed about the house to say goodby to her. When they had filed out of the room Mme. Turgenev declared that she felt better and asked for tea. The next day the following 'order' appeared:

"'I give orders that tomorrow morning the disobedient servants, Nicolas Jacovlef, Ivan Petrof and Egor Kondratatief, shall sweep the court in front of my windows.'

"Those names were those of servants who had not appeared at her bedside, possibly because they were a little drunk that evening. 'Good for nothings! Drunkards! exclaimed Mme. Turgenev. 'They rejoice at the death of their mistress!'"

The Bank Beat the Prince.

The Gentlewoman of London recalls the following story of the prince regent and Coutts' bank: "When George IV. was a regent he had a grudge against Coutts and determined to play a trick on the authorities. In those days even the great banks kept very small reserves of cash, and the playful prince thought out a plan to close Coutts'. So he sent his equerry round from Carlton House with a check for £100,000, fondly hoping that the bank would not be able to pay over the counter. The prince's trick, however, failed of success, as the wary old partner of the Strand bank proved equal to the occasion. He said at once to the equerry, 'How will his royal highness take the amount, in gold or notes?' The equerry hesitated and then said he had better go back to Carlton House to inquire. So he departed, and Coutts' had time to send to the Bank of England and get the cash required, but it was not needed, as the prince regent, seeing that Coutts' had got the best of him, did not return the check in question."

Eggs That Can't Be Found.

The eggs of some common birds of the present day have never been found. There is the robin snipe; its eggs have never been seen. An English zoologist kept a man going up and down the coast of Labrador for weeks purposely to get a robin snipe's egg, but it was in vain. The bird is known by thousands of people, but it breeds so far north and so remote from any civilization that no scientific observer can ever get to its nest ere the young are hatched and have taken to wing. The frigate bird that is so commonly seen at sea on the Pacific and off the West Indies is such a solitary bird and is so seldom seen in its nest during the hours of daylight that its egg is rare. It seems strange, but the eggs of so well known a bird as the sandpiper have never been found and are almost priceless.—London Globe.

Reversed the Proposition

Robert Wickliffe Woolley, the writer found it necessary not long ago to take a trip west. On the dining car of the train he saw that he had in his pocket 10 cents in change, his smallest bank note being one for $50. He handed this to the porter, who went to the end of the car for a conference with the conductor.

"I'm very sorry about this," said the conductor, standing in front of Woolley and toying with the big bill, "but we haven't the change for $50. We'll just take your address and send you the change."

Woolley calmly reached over and took possession of the banknote. "You've got nothing on me," he said. "I'll take the address of the railroad and send the price of the meal."—Chicago Record-Herald.

The Baths of Caracalla.

The Romans appear to have been well off in the matter of bathing places in the first and second centuries. In the baths of Caracalla 1,600 bathers could be accommodated at one time. The inclosed area was 360 square yards, but it included a course for foot racing. The bathing establishment was 240 yards in length by 124 wide. The remains of the walls are eight and ten feet thick and in some places as much as fifty feet high.

A Cumulative Test.

As the thin man and the stout one were talking of diet and food in general the thin man said: "You can get an excellent dinner at Clapham's, the restaurant near my office, for 25 cents. Ever try one of his dinners?"

"One of 'em! Yes, I should say I had," said the stout man. "Why, I ate four of 'em one day last week!"

The Best Thing.

"What do you mean by kissing me, Herr Frisch?"

"My aunt told me to. She told me to come and help myself to the best thing I could find in the kitchen."—Fliegende Blatter.

Just Men.

If any one says that he has seen a just man in want of bread I answer that it was in some place where there was no other just man.—St. Clement.

Can Afford It.

"Has the doctor a large practice?"

"So large that when people have nothing the matter with them he tells them so."—Pittsburg Post.

CHANGE IN WOMAN'S LIFE

Graniteville, Vt.—"I was passing through the Change of Life and suffered from nervousness and other annoying symptoms, and I can truly say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved worth mountains of gold to me, as it restored my health and strength. I never forget to tell my friends what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me during this trying period. Complete restoration to health is what I owe to me that for the sake of other suffering women I am willing to make my trouble public so you may publish this letter."—Mrs. Chas. Barclay, R.F.D., Graniteville, Vt.

No other medicine for woman's ills has received such wide-spread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine we know of has such a record of cures as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For more than 30 years it has been curing woman's ills such as inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains and nervous prostration, and it is unequalled for carrying women safely through the period of change of life.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, and always helpful.

ALL MY PIMPLES GONE

Girl Tells How a Blotchy Skin Was Cleansed By a Simple Wash.

"I was ashamed of my face," writes Miss Minnie Pickard of Altamahaw, N. C. "It was all full of pimples and scars, but after using D. D. D. Prescription I can say that now there is no sign of that Eczema, and that was three years ago."

D. D. D. has become so famous as a cure and instant relief in Eczema and all other serious skin diseases, that its value is sometimes overlooked in clearing up rash, pimples, blackheads, and all other minor forms of skin impurities.

The fact is, that while D. D. D. is so penetrating that it strikes to the very root of Eczema or any other serious trouble, the soothing Oil of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients are so carefully compounded there is no wash for the skin made that can compare with this great household remedy for every kind of skin trouble.

D. D. D. is pleasant to use, perfectly harmless to the most delicate skin, and absolutely reliable. A 25-cent bottle will give you positive proof of the wonderful effectiveness of this great remedy.

A Miracle Under Orders.

In "The Glory of the Shia World," translated from a Persian manuscript, is a story that will interest Christian Scientists:

"Nadir, builder of the 'golden porch of Nadir,' in the sacred city of Mesh-ed, was a world conqueror and a lord of perception, albeit cruel. Of his power of perception they relate that one day when he entered the sacred shrine he saw a blind man invoking the aid of the imam, and upon inquiry he learned that he had been there for several months. The great monarch asked him why his faith was so weak that his sight had not been restored and swore that if on his return he found him still blind he would cut off his head. The wretched man prayed so fervently and fixed his mind so intently on the imam that within a few minutes his sight was restored."

Might Be In a Nice Fix.

Two men of Milwaukee were discussing the case of a person of their acquaintance whose obituary, it appears, had been printed by mistake in one of that city's newspapers.

"Oh, ho!" exclaimed one of the Germans. "So dey haf brinted der funeral notice of a man who is not dead already! Vell, now, he'd be in a nice fix if he vas one of dose beeble vot believes everything dey sees in der bapers."—Harper's Magazine.

Do You Want to Get Slender?—

A food specialist said of dieting: "The simplest, easiest and most efficacious diet to bring down the weight is the one dish diet. At no meal, that is, should more than one dish be eaten. The dish may be what you will—Irish stew, macaroni and cheese, roast beef, vegetable soup, bacon and eggs—but no courses are to precede or follow it. You may eat as much as you choose of the dish, and yet, for all that, you will lose weight steadily. It's the variety of dishes—the oysters, soup, fish, turkey, mince pie, ice cream—it's the variety of dishes, creating an artificial appetite when the body has really had all it requires, that causes corpulence. If we confine ourselves to one dish we know when we've had enough—we don't know otherwise—and the result is that we soon drop down to the slimness natural to children, animals and temperate and healthy men and women."—Kansas City Star.

AFRAID OF MOONLIGHT.

The Reason Porto Ricans Carry Umbrellas at Night.

"The majority of Porto Ricans have instilled in them from earliest infancy a superstitious dread of the full moon's rays," said a business man who has just returned from that country.

"It is a curious sight to the American visitor to note men and women going along the streets and highways of the island with umbrellas raised over their heads in the long watches of the night, and the more brilliantly the moon is shining the greater will be the number of people who are thus protecting themselves from her beams. Out in the sequestered rural districts a gay mounted cavalier will be met at midnight, his bridle rein in one hand and an upraised umbrella in the other. It looks weird and also ridiculous, but the natives do it for a peculiar reason. They are possessed of the conviction that Luna's full light striking upon mortals is almost sure to make them mentally unsound—that is to say, lunatics—and that is why they interpose a shield between them and her dazzling brightness.

"To sleep where the moon could shine full upon one is, in the view of a Porto Rican, to tempt fate, and it would be a daring one who could be hired to do it for any consideration."—Baltimore American.

STRENUOUS LIVING.

A Long Day In the Life of an English Lady In 1791.

As for industrious idleness, which is held to blame for the wrecking of our nervous systems, it was not unknown to an earlier generation. Mme. le Brun assures us that in her youth pleasure loving people would leave Brussels early in the morning, travel all day to Paris to hear the opera and travel all night home. "That," she observes—as well she may—"was considered being fond of the opera."

A paragraph in one of Horace Walpole's letters gives us the record of a day and a night in the life of an English lady—sixteen hours of "strain" which would put New York to the blush. "I heard the Duchess of Gordon's journal of last Monday," he writes to Miss Berry in the spring of 1791. "She first went to hear Handel's music in the abbey; she then clambered over the benches and went to Hastings's trial in the hall, after dinner to the play, then to Lady Lucan's assembly, after that to Ranelagh and returned to Mrs. Hobart's faro table; gave a ball herself in the evening of that morning, into which she must have got a good way, and set out for Scotland the next day. Hercules could not have accomplished a quarter of her labors in the same space of time."—Atlantic Monthly.

A Pretty Poor Portrait.

A Chinaman of very high rank had his portrait painted, and when it was finished the painter requested him to inquire of the passersby what they thought of it. The other agreed and asked the first comer:

"Do you think this portrait like?"

"The hat is extremely like," replied the critic.

The subject of the portrait asked a similar question of a second stranger, who answered that the clothes seemed to be exactly reproduced. He was about to interrogate a third when the painter stopped him and said impatiently:

"The resemblance of the hat and clothes is of no importance. Ask this gentleman what he thinks of the face."

On being asked this question the stranger hesitated a very long time, but at last he replied:

"The beard and hair are first rate."

London as It Was.

Haydn's "Dictionary of Dates" makes the statement that the old name of the city of London was written Lynden or Llyndin, meaning "the city on the lake." An old tradition gives us to understand that London was founded by Brute, a descendant of Aeneas, and called New Troy or Troynovant until the time of Lud, who surrounded the town with walls and named it Caer-Lud, or Lud's Town. This latter is probably the correct version of the story, if for no other reason because it is an easy matter to detect a similarity between the expression Lud's Town and London. It is claimed by some writers that there was a city on the same spot 1,107 years B. C., and it is known that the Romans founded a city there called Londinium A. D. 61.

Real Modesty.

"An actor should be modest, and most actors are," said a prominent one at a luncheon in Pittsburg. "But I know a young actor who at the beginning of his career carried modesty almost too far.

"This young man inserted in all the dramatic papers a want advertisement that said:

"'Engagement wanted—small part, such as dead body or outside shoute preferred.'"

Preferences.

"I think I'll spend my vacation on the lynx," said the first flea. "I'm fond of golf."

"The giraffe for mine," declared the second flea. "I need the highest altitude I can find."—Washington Herald.
